Education Law

Naomi has a busy education practice, across a range of areas of law and a variety of jurisdictions. She regularly acts for and advises parents, students, schools, universities and local authorities. Her experience includes:

Higher education:

- Drafting pleadings and advising on claims of discrimination, breach of human rights, negligence, and breach of contract in the County Court
- Appearing in interim application hearings in the County Court (including an interim injunction)
- Advising a university on a series of ongoing consumer rights claims brought by students (led by Michael Tomlinson KC)
- Representing a university at a trial on claims of breach of contract and breach of human rights (settled at door of court)

Schools and FE colleges:

- Drafting pleadings and advising on claims of discrimination against schools and further education colleges in the County Court (including race, religious and transgender discrimination)
- Acting for parents and schools in disability discrimination final hearings in the First-tier Tribunal and Upper Tribunal
- Drafting pleadings and advising on breach of contract claims for and against independent schools.

Local authorities:

- Advising local authorities on policy decisions in relation to school admissions
- Clerking school admissions panels and independent review panels (school exclusions)
- Providing training on school admissions and exclusions law

Naomi also has extensive experience of employment law claims in the education sector, including:

- Representing peripatetic music teachers in complex holiday pay claims (including as junior counsel in the Supreme Court in Harpur Trust v Brazel [2022] UKSC 21 (led by Mathew Gullick KC))
- Advising a university on whether a former employee held a protected philosophical belief under the Equality Act 2010
- Achieving settlement for a school in a highly sensitive unfair dismissal and sex discrimination claim
- Successfully applying for a deposit order on behalf of a school in relation to weak discrimination claims

Prior to pupillage, Naomi worked as a research assistant at the University of Oxford, examining the effect of the 2012 changes to the law of school exclusions.

Naomi has a particular interest in religion and education and wrote her masters' dissertation on whether children have a right to a secular education.
