Overview

Elizabeth McGrath KC (Liz) was called to the Bar in 1987 and has practiced exclusively in family law for over 20 years, with a focus on children and care disputes. She was appointed Queen's Counsel in 2014 and is 3PB's Head of Chambers.

Liz has extensive expertise in public law, acting for Local Authorities, parents, and children in the High Court and the Court of Appeal. She has been instructed in numerous complex fact-finding hearings involving allegations of sexual abuse and non-accidental injuries and has appeared in several reported cases.

Public Inquiries and Complex Child Protection

Elizabeth McGrath KC is a highly experienced children law silk whose practice encompasses some of the most complex and sensitive public law proceedings to come before the Family Court. She has particular expertise in cases involving sexual abuse, organised child sexual exploitation, serious safeguarding failures and parallel police investigations.

Over a career spanning more than three decades, Liz has regularly been required to undertake detailed forensic examination of how children came to harm and the response of those charged with protecting them. Her work has involved consideration of the actions and decision-making of local authorities, social workers, police and other safeguarding professionals, often against a background of extensive historic material, contested evidence and complex information-sharing between agencies.

Liz has acted in two of the most significant operational care proceedings undertaken in England and Wales. These involved major safeguarding operations, large numbers of children and parties, substantial documentary evidence and extensive parallel investigation by the police and other agencies.

Her experience encompasses the difficult interaction between family and criminal proceedings, including disclosure, evidential sensitivity and the management of overlapping investigations.

She has particular expertise in complex fact-finding involving allegations of sexual abuse. She is accustomed to analysing extensive and sometimes fragmented evidence, establishing detailed chronologies, testing competing accounts and identifying the significance of decisions and information held by different professionals and organisations.

A substantial part of Liz's practice involves children and vulnerable witnesses. She is known for combining a sensitive and approachable manner with rigorous preparation and precise advocacy. Her experience enables her to deal effectively with highly sensitive evidence while maintaining the forensic focus required in proceedings of exceptional complexity and public importance.

Her experience is particularly relevant to inquiries involving child sexual exploitation and institutional safeguarding, including questions concerning multi-agency working, information-sharing, professional decision-making, disclosure, vulnerable witnesses and the response of statutory agencies to children at risk. Throughout her career Liz has regularly acted in serious and complex fact-finding hearings concerning allegations of sexual abuse, representing local authorities, parents, children and other interested parties.

Selected Relevant Experience

Operation Satchel Re P (Sexual Abuse – Finding of Fact Hearing) [2019] EWFC 27, presided over by Mr Justice MacDonald, the largest child sexual abuse investigation in West Midlands Police history

Liz acted in care proceedings arising alongside a major West Midlands Police investigation into organised child sexual abuse. The proceedings involved vulnerable children, multiple alleged perpetrators and substantial interaction between the family and criminal jurisdictions. Her work required consideration of extensive sensitive evidence and disclosure and the management of issues arising from parallel police and Family Court proceedings. In this major family court fact-finding hearing, MacDonald J dealt with a complex case involving 14 children from 6 different families who brought forward serial allegations of intra-familial and inter-familial sexual abuse.

Operation Directive RE AA & 25 Ors (Children) [2019] EWFC 64, presided over by Sir Mark Hedley, was at the time the largest public law children case ever litigated in the UK.

Private Law

She is often instructed in highly sensitive private law children disputes, particularly those involving residence, contact, relocation, LGBT parenting, and surrogacy. Her vast experience across both private and public family law, combined with her down-to-earth and approachable manner, inspires confidence in instructing solicitors and allows her to build a strong rapport with clients.

Liz's meticulous preparation ensures she quickly identifies the key issues in complex cases. While she provides firm and fair advice with a focus on early resolution where possible, she is also known for her concise, robust, and effective advocacy when a judicial decision is required.

Private law

Private Law Children and Domestic Abuse

Liz represents parents and guardians (where appointed) in highly sensitive residence and contact cases, often involving expert psychological or psychiatric evidence to assist the court in determining welfare issues. She is a formidable advocate in cases concerning allegations of sexual abuse, parental alienation, and complex private law disputes, including those involving domestic abuse, coercive control, and neglect.

Her extensive experience extends to cases with an international element, where urgent and comprehensive advice is essential. She is particularly well-known for her expertise in relocation cases (both international and domestic) and disputes over child arrangements, including those involving allegations of alienating behaviours.

Liz has represented clients from diverse backgrounds, including individuals with learning difficulties. Her experience enable her to build strong client relationships and provide clear, strategic guidance to achieve the best possible outcome.
