Overview

Oliver Tribe is a crime and regulatory crime pupil barrister, based in Winchester. A Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, Oliver is currently undergoing a 12-month pupillage with 3PB ahead of his return in May 2027 for further employment as a naval barrister with Navy Legal Services. He has just spent two weeks' marshalling at Portsmouth and Southampton Crown Courts and a week assisting the Service Prosecutor at the Military Court Centre, Bulford.

For the last nine years, Oliver has been a Logistics Officer in the Royal Navy based in Portsmouth, Hampshire, where he has had broad experience across various operational sea-going and non-operational staff assignments.

Prior to selection for legal training, Oliver was employed as an Operational Planner working in Navy Command Headquarters providing logistic and sustainability expertise in the planning of enduring and future operational deployments.

Earlier, Oliver acted as a Service Complaint Caseworker, processing complaints through the admissibility gateway stages. Previously Deputy Logistics Officer of HMS KENT, he managed catering, supply chain, HR whilst also providing secretarial support for the Commanding Officer during a busy operational schedule including the inaugural 8-month UK Carrier Strike Group deployment. A former maths teacher, Oliver taught secondary school students for three years in both a private and state school.

Outside work, Oliver is kept busy with a young family and keeps up his passion for running. A keen sportsman, Oliver played as a midfielder with Weymouth FC between 2008 and 2012, before being released from his contract when he left to go to Exeter University.
