Overview

Eugene Tang is a personal injury, clinical negligence and inquests barrister who joined 3PB in October 2026. He is a probationary tenant and is based from 3PB's London office.

A former employed barrister within a major UK and international law firm's in-house chambers, Eugene has specialised in personal injury since 2024 with a strong focus in road traffic accident trials involving elements of credit hire and fundamental dishonesty, as well as public/employers' liability. He is currently developing his caseload in inquests, public inquiries and Court of Protection.

Eugene's international background and being a native Cantonese and Mandarin speaker have seen him receive instructions from Hong Kong and Mainland China's insureds and insurers. A qualified mediator, Eugene has also handled cases which were resolved using ADR rather than the courts.

Prior to obtaining pupillage, Eugene was a paralegal to the Infected Blood Inquiry for over two years, where he worked closely with Counsel to the Inquiry on all aspects of the investigation, including preparing counsels' notes, drafting questions to experts, and reviewing documents. His academic background in psychology and neuroscience gives him an advantage in handling matters requiring medical knowledge and emotional sensitivity, and he is keen to act for medical professionals and NHS trusts. His LLM dissertation, titled "Revisiting Halsey from a Clinical Negligence Perspective: The Role and Future of Mediation", was awarded the Henderson Chambers Prize with a 95% mark.
