3PB Barristers are proud to announce the launch of the first book on the law on school exclusions since 2002, co-authored by Charlotte Hadfield and Alice de Coverley.

‘The Law in Relation to School Exclusions’, published by Law Brief Publishing, will be launched officially on November 25 at 5pm in a Q&A interview with both authors via Zoom. Please book here.

Exclusion from school is a sanction of last resort that can hugely and adversely impact on a pupil’s life outcomes for many years. Moreover, the law on school exclusions is a complex tangle of public and regulatory, anti-discrimination and human rights law, statutory guidance, and, in relation to independent schools, principles of commercial contact and tort. Schools and parents alike find it difficult to know where to start, whether to challenge a decision to exclude or to defend one. This book offers a practical guide to the law and serves as an excellent and useful source of reference for pupils and their parents, head teachers, governing boards of schools, local authorities, and practitioners in this surprisingly complex and multidisciplinary area. You can buy a copy here directly from the publishers, or via Amazon here.
